The CNN article in the link below explains why Supply-Side economics has crippled the US economy.

"I don't feel crippled."

-- U.S. Economy

I don't know about your criteria for "crippled" is, but I think a more objective statement should replace such a subjective, biased-sounding one.

Unemployment has been going down since mid-2009.

GDP has also been on the rise.

Also, you might find that a one sentence post with a link to a long article might not get a lot of people to read the article. Might want to summarize it and relate it directly to concepts in the class. I.e. A policy of tax cuts between years __ and __ had an affect on supply which did ____, etc.
